Patricia Egwuatu is a Family Medicine Physician and Faculty Attending at Kaiser Permanente Family Medicine Residency Program in Seattle, WA. I am the daughter of Nigerian and Ugandan immigrants who grew up in South King County in Auburn, WA and I attended the University of Washington for college. I graduated from Pacific NW University of Health Sciences for Medical School and trained as a Resident Physician at University of Washington Family Medicine Residency Program. As a Faculty Attending I also co facilitate our Racism in Medicine curriculum and DIE efforts. In addition, I am also clerkship director for our rotating Medical Students.
