

Christopher Archiopoli is the Director of Peer Seattle, a non-profit organization that offers peer emotional support, wraparound services, and a safe space for Washington state residents affected by substance use disorder, mental health issues, or HIV/AIDS. As a public health consumer, Archiopoli began receiving services at Dunshee House in 2008, continuing his involvement at Seattle Area Support Groups and becoming a Peer Coach in 2018. His passion lies in advocating for people living with HIV/AIDS and those dealing with substance use disorders.
