8 WHEREAS, the Museum of Flight has been a significant national resource for

16 WHEREAS, the Red Barn®, the birthplace of the Boeing Company, was saved

22 WHEREAS, the Museum of Flight's fundamental goals are to acquire and 23 preserve a wide array of materials and artifacts relating to aviation and space history and 24 to provide a center for the scholarly research of these materials and artifacts, and

25 WHEREAS, exhibits are artifact-based for credibility, professionally researched 26 and designed according to a carefully thought-out comprehensive storyline, based on the

29 WHEREAS, the Museum of Flight serves as a resource to the public schools, with 30 ongoing youth programs designed to complement established schoolroom curricula, 31 foster interest in math and science, through factual and interactive exhibits, education 32 events and symposia; and

33 WHEREAS, the museum's extensive collection of historic photographs, books 34 and precious papers are used by scholars for historic and scientific research in 35 aeronautical technology, and

36 WHEREAS, both the governor and Legislature of Washington state have included 37 three million dollars in the state's capital budget for development of a space gallery to 38 house the space shuttle and other space-exploration artifacts, and

39 WHEREAS, the space gallery would be built across the street from the current 40 museum, and almost eight million of the twelve million dollars needed to complete the 41 project has already been raised, and architectural work on the building has begun to meet 42 the required completion date to qualify for a shuttle of July 2011, and

43 WHEREAS, the Museum of Flight is an important attraction for guests to 44 Washington state. More than fifty million tourist trips help sustain Washington's
