With businesses being able to get their licenses easier, this prompted the boom for the wine industry in Woodinville.

"I really feel like the growth has been amazing; when we started in 2000, there were four tasting rooms and now there are 52," said Bigelow.

Using its rural surroundings to its advantage, Woodinville was able to become an epicenter for outdoor activities such as golf, horseback riding, hot air balloon riding and hiking.

Based on these activities that targeted an older demographic of adults (ages 30+), wine was able to fit right in and quickly become one of Woodinville's most sought after luxury.

Out of 800 wineries in Washington, 100 of them are in Woodinville and that number is only expanding as Woodinville's popularity increases. As John Bigelow said, wine "puts Woodinville on the map."
